

Bernard DiCasimirro has had a life-long love affair with theatre beginning in the fourth grade. He studied theatre at Franklin and Marshall College and has remained a student of theatre attending classes in various theatres in the Midwest and the Northeast.

Over the last thirty years, he has made his home in the Philadelphia area and has acted and directed with several companies in Bucks County, Philadelphia, and South Jersey. No stranger to the American Association of Community Theatre, Bernard has been involved with nine national festivals beginning in Torrington CT in 2003.

He served as alternative adjudicator for the Gettysburg Festival in 2019. He is also a board certified psychiatrist and brings that knowledge and experience to his work as an actor, director and adjudicator. He is very excited to be a part of this year's ESTA Festival.
