

Paul has had the extreme privilege of working in the theatre as an actor, director and designer over the past 45 years. He has worked with both theatrical organizations and educational institutions across New York State. It is with great pride that Paul was able to work with his colleague, Kristie Fuller on an HIV/AIDs education production entitled, Despite these Marks. The opportunity to act in this original piece of theatre with a cast assembled from across New York State was one of the highlights of Paul's career. Paul is an active participant in the Theatre Association of New York State (TANYS), ESTA - Eastern State Theater Association (ESTA) and the American Association of Community Theatres (AACT). Paul has served in key roles for these organizations including serving as an adjudicator on a local, state, regional, national and international level. Paul's work as an actor and director has been recognized by both TANYS and ESTA, along with recognition by AACT for his contributions to the overall theatre community. Paul's professional career has allowed him the opportunity to work with and serve multiple at-risk populations including individuals with the intellectual disabilities, mental health diagnoses, substance use disorders and individuals who have been incarcerated. Paul currently works as a Registered Nurse for Horizon Health Services in an addiction and mental health facility in downtown Buffalo, NY.
